A website devoted to the influential text Manual de Urbanidad y Buenas Maneras, written by Manuel Antonio Carreño. This website is dedicated to the study of the wildly successful etiquette guide Manual de Urbanidad y Buenas Maneras (1853), by Venezuelan Manuel Carreño. Despite instant success, international popularity, and role in setting standards for behaviour in Spanish America from the 1850s to the present, Carreño ' s Manual remains little studied.

Manual de Carreño. Manual de urbanidad y buenas maneras. Hoy en día, cuando se pautan inéditas normas de urbanidad -urbs, urbe- o reglas para la convivencia en la ciudad, que cambian y se adecuan a la velocidad con que vivimos, el "Manual de Urbanidad y buenas maneras" de Manuel Antonio Carreño quizá sea para muchos un libro pasado de moda, una reliquia de la antigüedad.

The Life and Music of Teresa Carreño (1853–1917): A Guide to Research is an essential reference on the extant primary sources, secondary literature, compositions, and recordings for scholars, students, musicians, or any interested in the life and career of Teresa Carreño, a Venezuelan-born pianist and composer. This guide is divided into three sections: (1) Life – includes a biography that examines Carreño’s career from her early performances as a musical prodigy through her years as a mature and internationally acclaimed artist in the 1910s, and a chronology; (2) Work – consists of annotated entries about manuscripts, early and modern editions, concert programs, piano rolls, and sound recordings; (3) Writings – consists of annotated entries about correspondence written to or by Carreño between 1873 and 1917, and primary and second literature published between 1862 and 2016. This is an important reference that brings forward the latest research on Carreño in a single volume.

When did you last tell your children to put their hand over their mouth when they yawn? When did you last suggest that when they are introduced to someone they should shake hands firmly and look them in the eye? Do you suggest that they should wait until everyone is served before they eat rather than Hoover up the best bit for themselves? Do you demand that your young daughter dress decorously lest she elicit outraged looks? Do you think that the children of today have disgraceful manners? Unlike, of course, when you were young ... Well, that’s certainly what Erasmus of Rotterdam thought in 1530 when he published De Civilitate Morum Puerilium: A Handbook on Good Manners for Children. He felt that learning good manners was crucial to a child’s upbringing, and that the uncouth and ill-disciplined behaviour around him demanded a new kind of book. After all, as William of Wykeham memorably said in the 1350s, ‘Manners maketh man’. A Handbook on Good Manners for Children is considered to be the first treatise in Western Europe on the moral and practical education of children. It was a massive bestseller - indeed the biggest-selling book of the sixteenth century - going into 130 editions over 300 years and being translated into 22 languages within ten years of its publication. In it, Erasmus concerns himself with matters such as how to dress, how to behave at table, how to converse with one’s elders and contemporaries, how to address the opposite sex and much else. For example: Table Manners ‘It’s just as rude to lick greasy fingers as it is to wipe them on your clothing. Use a cloth or napkin instead.’ ‘Some people, no sooner than they’ve sat down, immediately stick their hands into the dishes of food. This is the manner of wolves.’ ‘Making a raucous noise or shrieking intentionally when you sneeze, or showing off by carrying on sneezing on purpose, is very ill-mannered.’ ‘To fidget around in your seat, and to settle first on one buttock and then the next, gives the impression that you are repeatedly farting, or trying to fart.’ The advice is as relevant today as it was 500 years ago.

Sitting there, facing Bond Street, he had his face turned to the sea. His pallor showed how recently he had emerged from it into the port: so did his lack of interest in the schoolgirls opposite. He was like the lagging finger of the barometer, still pointing to Fair long after its companion had moved to Stormy. Below him the black clerks moved churchward, but their wives in brilliant afternoon dresses of blue and cerise aroused no interest in Wilson. He was alone on the balcony except for one bearded Indian in a turban who had already tried to tell his fortune: this was not the hour or the day for white men they would be at the beach five miles away, but Wilson had no car. He felt almost intolerably lonely. On either side of the school the tin roofs sloped towards the sea, and the corrugated iron above his head clanged and clattered as a vulture alighted.
